TEACHING HISTORY SUMMER INSTITUTE 2014:

HISTORICAL THINKING: TEACHING PEACE AND CONFLICT IN CANADIAN HISTORY

JULY 8-9, 2014

Oral History Centre, 2B23 Bryce Hall

SPECIAL GUEST KEYNOTE SPEAKER:

journalist, author, and activist

Jamie Swift, coauthor (with Ian McKay) of Warrior Nation: Rebranding Canada in an Age of Anxiety

The 2014 University of Winnipeg Teaching History Summer Institute explores the relationships between conflict and peace, between memory and history, and between wars abroad and conflict at home. This year's Summer Institute approaches the centennial of World War I as a departure point for an in-depth examination of the various dimensions of conflict and peace in modern and contemporary Canadian history. Insights generated from guest speakers, presenters, participants, and cutting-edge scholarship will be combined to produce practical and creative learning strategies for use in the classroom.

As always, the institute strives to engage teachers, students, communities, and the wider public in a debate about historical thinking and the dynamic link between history and contemporary issues. As part of this partnership, Manitoba Education encourages teachers from grades 5 to 12 to participate in this valuable learning experience.
